Understanding the Distinction: Presidents vs. Prime Ministers

Before diving into specific countries, it is essential to clarify the difference between presidents and prime ministers, as these titles imply different powers and responsibilities depending on the nation's constitutional design.

Presidents are often elected at the national level (via popular vote or electoral college) and tend to serve as the head of state, embodying national unity and sovereignty. Their powers can range from ceremonial to executive authority, depending on whether the country has a presidential, semi-presidential, or parliamentary system.

Prime Ministers are typically the head of government, responsible for running day-to-day operations, policy-making, and managing the cabinet. They usually derive their legitimacy from the legislative body and are often appointed or confirmed by the head of state or parliament.

Many countries blend these roles in hybrid systems, where the president may hold significant executive powers alongside a prime minister who manages government affairs. Understanding each country's particular political context is vital for interpreting the roles and influence of their leaders.
